For the Bride and Groom, the Best Man's speech is no laughing matter. Cue, new business; www.HelpWithBestManSpeech.com, offering 2 hour one-on-one intensive sessions (in person or over Skype) to men who need help writing, delivering or simply practicing their speech - founded by Annabella Forbes.

Men find it harder to practice their speeches in front of other men. Forbes remedies this: as a girl she is impartial, will impart valuable pearls of wedding etiquette wisdom and make sure the speech is relevant to everyone. Importantly she will teach the Best Man how to enjoy giving the speech rather than lose sleep over it. She will ensure he fills his time slot with charming, witty, fun, thoughtful humour delivered in the best way possible.

Forbes decided to launch this new venture after helping many of her male friends with their speeches. She has also been witness to 100's of wedding speeches that could have been great were a little more effort and preparation put in, insisting that it doesn't take much to turn a terrible speech into something brilliant. Annabella has a huge amount of experience in performance, public-speaking, improvised-comedy, speech-writing, coaching, and general morale-boosting, plus a degree in English and Anthropology from Durham University.

"In essence, when it comes to the big day, compared to Groom, the Best Man has not just made the biggest commitment of his life, so his job should be easy! And I will help make it so". Annabella Forbes, Founder - HelpWithBestManSpeech.com

Annabella also helps Brides who want to make a speech which is becoming increasingly popular.
